No. 12

Food plus cotton equals prosperity. Full production of the food for our people and the food for our growing live-stock industry in the South should be the first and most important consideration. Safe farming demands caution this time. Supply your own needs first as a sound measure of protection, then hold your cotton acreage down to a moderate figure, less than in 1918, in order that we may safeguard the production and not destroy our prosperity by deliberately over producing. It is up to the South to play a safe game. Safety first demands that every cotton farmer, big and little, shall cooperate in holding down the cotton acreage.
